

Judeland's story

An Easy Read case study

Judeland was born in Sri Lanka.

He moved to Australia in 1998.

When he was 11, Judeland was injured in a war.

He needs to use a wheelchair.

After Judeland moved to Australia, he studied banking and managing money.

He works at the Australian Taxation Office (ATO).

Judeland loves sports.

But he worried about how to play sport in a wheelchair.

Then, Judeland started going to the gym to see what he could do.

He then started playing wheelchair sports, like basketball and handball.

He also started playing in the Victorian Wheelchair Football League.

In 2018, Judeland was in an accident.

He broke lots of bones.

Judeland needed lots of support for personal care, like getting dressed.

He also needed to change his home and car to suit his needs.

Before the Disability Gateway, Judeland got his information from health care workers.

But he likes to:

- go online
- research things on his own.

Now Judeland can get information from the Disability Gateway.

He likes that he can search for lots of different things on one website.

Judeland thinks the Disability Gateway is helpful for:

- people with disability

- their carers.

He also thinks the Disability Gateway can help the community understand what people with disability need.

Judeland said,

“I think the Disability Gateway will make life easier for a lot of people.”
